FISCAL ANALYSIS

ASSUMPTION

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator (CTS) assume the proposed legislation would change the maximum number of small claims petitions that can be filed by a party from eight in one year to three in a 30-day period. This would be a potential fourfold increase in small claim filings.

There is the potential for a significant increase in small claim filings, but CTS has no way of determining what that increase might be. Although some of these cases may be ones that would have been filed in the associate divisions, small claim filings require a significant amount of clerk time – an average of 2.5 hours per case, because clerks are required to assist the petitioner with the filing process.

Any significant increase in court workload would be reflected in future budget requests.

FISCAL IMPACT - Small Business

No direct fiscal impact to small businesses would be expected as a result of this proposal.

DESCRIPTION

Under current law, persons are limited to filing eight small claims actions per year. The proposed legislation would change that limit to three small claims actions per 30-day period.

This legislation is not federally mandated, would not duplicate any other program and would not require additional capital improvements or rental space.
